Speech, Flowers Mark 'Namron's' Retirement Sat.

"Truth is stranger than fiction," said Fran Russell TV newscaster now with babcock and Wilcox in Lynchburg, in addressing a capacity crowd on hand for the retirement ceremony Saturday evening, May 25, of Mr. Namron, Tennessee Walking Horse, owned by the T. M. Trents, of Appomattox.

In the first such retirement ceremony ever seen in Appomattox, T. M. Trent took Mr. Namron into the show ring for the last time. He put through his paces; then decorated him with a blanket of flowers. A slow walk around the ring accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. Trent, their daughter, Lina, and groom Dickie Wright brought his show career to a close.

"Unruly Colt" to Champ

In a special retirement speech, Fran Russell traced the story of this world champion show horse from a little town in Tennessee where he was an "unruly colt" to his crowning as a world champion two year old in Shelbyville, Tennessee, in April of 1953. Namron was born June 10, 1[illegible] out of Mary Anne Young, sired by Midnight Sun.

Namron's owners have included Willie Young, George Witt, Winston Wiser, R. W. Norman, of Salisbury, N. C.; Wade Steppe a walking horse trainer, and his present owners, T. M. Trent and daughter, Lina, who have shown the stallion many times during his career.

It was Winston Wiser, Fran Russell told the horse show audience, who trained Namron faithfully and who saw him take the world's championship for two year old, and a year later, for three year olds.

During the zenith of Mr. Namron's career, R. W. Norman—then his owner — was offered $15,000 for the stallion, a bid which was refused.

VHSA Champion

In 1962 Mr. Namron added to his laurels by being declared Virginia Horse Shows Association champion for 1962. In February, 1962, Namron appeared during the Florida Circuit in competition with Namron's Image, an up and coming Walking Horse he had sired. The judge, unable to decide between them, said there WAS no first and second, but rather, two top horses, and that each rated first place.

Trent said Saturday that he wants to retire Namron while he's on top. He retires him to stud now with hopes of someday having another Tennessee Walking Horse the caliber of Mr. Namron.

Park Service Invites Bids For Ct. House

Park Superintendent Tom Norris announced Monday that specifications have been received at Appomattox Court House National Historical Park for the reconstruction of the old Court House as a visitors' center. The bids will also cover extensions of a service garage on park property.

To Open Bids June 18

Bids for the project will be opened at the Appomattox park headquarters on June 18, and Supt. Norris said he expects the Court House to be under contract shortly after July 1. National Park Service will allow 180 working days for the project, he said. However, he does not expect the Court House to be complete and ready for occupancy until the summer of 1964. He said that building requirements for the reconstruction are very rigid, and that delays may be experienced in obtaining suitable and authentically reproduced materials.

The old Court House stood prominently in the center of the village until its destruction by fire in 1892. The interior has been designed by Lynchburg architect J. Everette Fauber to house a visitors' lounging area, information center and public sales area on the ground floor with a central auditorium and exhibition corridor on the second floor. The auditorium is to seat, approximately 72 people, Norris said.

MISS FLORA BELLE WILLIAMS

Many Gifts, Honors Bestowed Upon Retiring School Principal

Miss Flora Belle Williams, due to retire at the close of this school session as principal of Appomattox Elementary School, has been the recipient of many honors and gifts during the past few weeks. The Primary SCA at their meeting Friday gave her a silver sugar bowl and creamer.

At the Appomattox Education Association meeting Friday she and two other retiring teachers, were given silver bowls. A portrait of Miss Williams was presented to the elementary School Thursday night, May 16.

Retired school superintendent Jerry A. Burke, in presenting the portrait to the school on behalf of four county organizations, complimented Miss Williams for the high standards which she has set for her school and its staff. He stated that the school has a rather enviable position among state systems. It has been visited by committees from other counties and states. He stated that these visitors have found it unbelievable that the physical condition of the building could be in such excellent condition after eight years of usage. These remarks were made in emphasis of Miss Williams efficiency as an educational administrator.

Miss Williams received her early education under tutors in her home and then graduated from Charlotte High School in Charlotte County. She holds a Bachelor of Science Degree from Longwood College and has done graduate work at the College of William and Mary and the University of Virginia.

She has said that her motto is 'Convention Bound' and it is evidenced by her attendance record at professional meetings. In addition to having a perfect attendance record at both state and district meetings of the Virginia Education Association since coming to Appomattox in 1932, she has also been in regular attendance at all district and state principals conferences and study groups. Other affiliations include being a life member of the Appomattox Elementary School PT-

Farrar Named Area Winner

John Farrar, 17, has been named area winner of the Future Farmers of America Foundation award for Farm and Home Electrification. A rising senior in the Appomattox High School, John is the son of Mr. and Mrs. John T. Farrar, Evergreen.

Young Farrar has applied many improved practices in electrification on the home farm. Among his accomplishments in electrification are the rewiring of outbuildings on the farm and installation of power tools in the farm shop.

By placing first in the fifteen-county area, John's application is in line for consideration for state honors. Announcements of the state winner will be made during the State FFA Convention at Blacksburg June 17-20.

School Close Wed. June 5

Superintendent Earl Smith has announced that students will be using today, Memorial Day, as a make-up day and will hold regular classes. Friday and Monday will also be full days. Students will stay home Tuesday while teachers complete records. On Wednesday pupils will be in school only long enough to pick up report cards. Thursday is another work day for teachers.
